

Melbourne Airport

Melbourne Airport is located 22 km northwest of Melbourne and is easily accessible by public transport. It is one of the main international airports servicing Australia.

The airport has two main terminals serving international and domestic flights. For passengers arriving, departing or in transit, the airport is well equipped to cater to the needs of travellers.

There is an ample selection of cafes and restaurants throughout the airport. The Garden City Food Court caters for all tastes, from spicy Asian to Italian. There are other refreshment options, including a Cafe Espresso and various vending machines. Shopping includes duty-free and regular retail outlets. They are located on the departures level of the international terminal and are open seven days a week.

Several banks are located in the airport. Four bureaux de change are also provided in the international terminal and ATMs are located in the area between the check-in counters and on the departures level. The airport has two information desks located in the arrivals and departures halls.

Disability facilities such as wheelchair-accessible toilets, travelators and lifts are available throughout the terminal. There are business and conference facilities on the arrivals level of the international terminal, including a fully serviced business centre provided by the Hilton Melbourne Airport.

Transportation

By car

To get to Melbourne city centre, take the Tullamarine Freeway and CityLink toll road. CityLink toll passes can be obtained from machines positioned near the car park ticket machines on the ground and second floors of the airport's covered walkways.

By taxi

Taxis are found on the ground floor level of the terminal. Journeys to downtown Melbourne take about 30 minutes.

By bus

The SkyBus runs 24 hours a day. The service operates every 30 minutes and stops at hotels and various points throughout the city centre.
